WHO IS THIS TRAINING FOR?

This is an essential professional training for frontline workers, managers and business leaders in all industry sectors who want to expand their knowledge and skills in understanding, recognising and responding to family violence.

Family violence is a community-wide issue that is prevalent in Australia. According to evidence-backed research, workplaces that support their staff who are experiencing family violence are more likely to reach significant positive business outcomes, including increased wellbeing, safety and performance of staff. There are also many ways businesses can proactively work with staff and clients who are experiencing family violence, to support them on their journey.

COURSE CONTENT

This one-day tailored training will be based on your workplace needs and time frames. The course content will give you and your team the skills and knowledge to understand, recognise and respond to family violence. Participants will be empowered to support staff and clients who are experiencing family violence, and they'll be equipped to provide referrals to appropriate support services.

LEARNING OUTCOMES:

- An intersectional perspective of family violence.
- The root causes of family violence.
- Who experiences family violence in Australia?
- Who perpetrates family violence?
- What are the barriers faced by victim-survivors who leave a family violence situation?
- What are the short and long-term impacts of family violence?
- Why is family violence a workplace issue?
- Responding to disclosures of family violence.
- What you can do to be a part of the change.
